

The total receipts of the National Garfield monument association are $180,758.

One of the most sensible things the New York legislature did was enact a law prohibiting the sale of the murderous toy pistol.

The metropolitan daily papers that made arrangements to receive Mr. Spurgeon's sermons by cable, have dropped them. We presume that as a financial investment the sermons proved unprofitable.

John Sherman was in Chicago this week, and of him the Inter Ocean speaks as follows: "Mr. Sherman is looking in splendid health, and does not show any evidence of wear, even after his long and arduous public service. He speaks enthusiastically of the republican prospects in Ohio, of the strength of the ticket, and considers its election sure."

General Sherman is determined to do all he can to raise the moral standard of the army, and therefore does not intend to let Major Nickerson's divorce go by default. Having had obtained a decree of divorce by fraud, and then married another woman, the general at once directed General Drum to take steps for assembling a court-martial to try the case. For some time the morality of the army has been none too good, and the effort of General Sherman to properly punish Major Nickerson will be applauded by the people.

The second volume of the English translation of the famous "Surgeon's Stories" of Professor Topelius is in press, and will soon be published by Janes, McIlurg & Co. This series forms one of the greatest works in modern literature. The second volume, which is entitled "Times of Battle and of Rest," covers the period of Swedish history from the times succeeding the death of Gustaf Adolf to the reign of the other great Swedish king, Charles XII, who forms the subject of the third volume. This work has the same romantic charm, the same beauty of style and rich poetic coloring, that have made the first volume of the series so greatly admired. And in exciting incidents, fascinating narration, and striking delineation of the great events and characters with which it has to deal, it is thought to fully equal that remarkable volume, "Times of Gustaf Adolf." It will be published in uniform style, at $1.25.

The most gratifying piece of intelligence we have received for some time is the killing of that inhuman wretch, N. L. Dukes, of Uniontown Pennsylvania. It will be remembered that last December he killed Captain A. C. Nutt, state treasurer of Pennsylvania. Dukes seduced his daughter under promise of marriage, then broke that promise, and went about town boasting of the deed. When Captain Nutt undertook to have some settlement with the villain for his conduct, Dukes drew a revolver and shot him dead. He was tried, but the jury was bribed and Dukes was acquitted. He left town for a while but returned only to air his boastful spirit and glory in seducing a girl and killing her father. Last night the son of the murdered man saw his opportunity, drew his pistol with a steady hand and brought his victim to the ground, a lifeless corpse. This is a brother and a son's vengeance, and it is just. When a man betrays woman and openly boasts of the crime and then murders the father of the woman in cold blood, he is not fit to encumber the earth, and his taking off is an act of righteousness, but only when a bribed jury defeats and results justice.

THE ENGLISH SPARROW.

Janesville and other cities in Wisconsin are to a certain extent over-run by the English sparrow, and it is becoming a serious question as to what means shall be employed to exterminate them. They are multiplying with fearful rapidity, and each year are increasing in power to work devastation. They won't leave the country. They won't die when winter comes. They live somewhere during the bleak snows and the cold winds of the winter months, and in the spring come out with renewed strength to spread desolation. In Pennsylvania there is a law which permits everybody to kill the English sparrow. In that state they are becoming a greater terror than ever the wolf was in Wisconsin. They have spread over the whole of Eastern Pennsylvania, and are not only proving death to other birds, but they are making destructive raids on fields and gardens. Each bird destroys ten times more than he can devour, and when the number that prey upon one field is counted by the tens of thousands the devastation can be more easily imagined than described.

The time has come in Pennsylvania when a systematic extermination of the sparrow must begin. The shotgun will be used in destroying the nests, for that is the only way any progress can be made in the work of extermination. To attempt to kill each individual bird would be folly because they are numbered by the millions, and can never be blotted out in that way. This year there will be a general raid on the nests in all the towns, cities and counties infested by this pestiferous bird. There will be a repetition of this raid each year until extermination is practically finished.

Something of this kind will have to be done some day in Wisconsin. Already the English sparrows are doing their deadly work among us. They drive away other birds; they devour the ripening fruit; they inflict great damage to gardens; and are beginning to injure the fields of grain. The only way to begin the business of destroying the sparrow is to attack the nest. If this is not done in good time, Wisconsin will shortly be as severely afflicted with the English sparrow as some of the eastern states are at the present time.

AVENGED.

Uniontown, Pennsylvania, the Scene of Another Tragedy.

Dukes, the Murderer of Capt. Nutt, Killed by his Victim's Son.

Details of the Bloody Act and Account of the Events Which Caused It.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., June 14.—The Dispatch has the following particulars by special telegram of the murder of N. L. Dukes, by the son of Capt. Nutt. Last evening at Uniontown, Fayette county, about 7:30 o'clock, James Nutt, oldest son of the late Capt. A. C. Nutt, shot and killed N. L. Dukes, who on the 24th day of December last killed Capt. Nutt. Dukes was standing in front of the Jennings house when the evening mail arrived, a few minutes before 7, and he remained there talking to several men who were apparently in a very fine humor, as he was laughing and conversing in a free and easy manner at the time above stated. He started down to get his mail, the postoffice being only a block from the Jennings house. The postoffice faces on Pittsburgh street, and the building in which it is located stands on the corner of Main and Pittsburgh streets, and has been known ever since its erection, which was many years ago, as the "Round Corner." The room immediately in front of the postoffice and facing on Main street has for many years been occupied as a drug store, but that has been removed and the front completely torn out, and is being remodeled for a banking-room for the First National bank. Near Main street stood James Nutt, and when Dukes reached the spot, or got a little beyond where he stood, Nutt opened fire on him and shot him twice in the back, immediately in the rear of the heart. Dukes started on a dead run, pursued by Nutt, who again fired three more shots, two of which took effect in his back, only about two inches from the first two, the fifth and last striking him on the left ankle as he was getting up the postoffice steps. Dukes then had two steps to go up into the postoffice, and when he reached the top one he fell forward on his face. There was an immense crowd of people standing around on the outside of the office, and they ran in every direction for fear of being shot. The fifth ball grazed the ankle, and glauced off and went through some lock-box. A number of persons rushed up the steps when Dukes fell, and at the same time a policeman ran forward and caught Nutt, who made no resistance whatever, but said to the officer, "Here, take this," whereupon he gave him his revolver. Officer Reggs said to him, "You have done a bad piece of work." Nutt replied, "Yes, but I could not help it." The officer took Nutt to jail, and Dukes was carried to the same old room in the Jennings house where he was killed, and he has continued to occupy ever since. Corner Sturgeon arrived on the scene of the shooting and took charge of Dukes' body. He lived only about half a minute after being shot the last time. A friend of his was at his side and he tried to speak, but could only utter something so indistinct that he could not be understood. He evidently knew he was shot, for he turned around when his first shot was fired, and looked at Nutt while he was firing the second shot, and then ran. As soon as Dukes was pronounced dead by the coroner he was taken to the room where he killed the father of the boy who killed him.

The coroner then unbuttoned his jury, which consisted of A. J. Gilmore, George C. Marshall, Dr. J. S. Gaddis, John N. Dawson, W. H. Miller and H. H. Hoskey, Jr. After the jury was sworn it was decided to postpone the examination of witnesses.

The jury then proceeded to examine the body. Dukes' coat was first taken off and examined. The pockets contained some papers, which were not looked at. The back had a few bullet holes in it on the left side. The vest contained nothing of any importance, and the holes in the vest corresponded with those in the coat. A dirk-knife was found hanging to the suspender button on the left side, where he could grasp it in an instant with his right hand. In the right hip pocket was found the revolver with which he shot Capt. Nutt. The dirk was found near the coat and the revolver used by Nutt was the same one which his father had at the time Dukes killed him, but it was not. It was a Colt 32-caliber and not so large as his father had at the time of his death. All these things were taken by the coroner.

On a late examination of the wounds it was found that three of the balls and not two penetrated his body. They are so close together that a ring four inches in diameter will cover them all. Two of them went clear through the body and could be seen just through the skin, on the right side of the breast, and the other as near the breast as could be. This one fractured a rib. These balls were pulled out and the body probed by the coroner and his father, Dr. Sturgeon. It was found the bullets passed in the right arm and very near the heart. The third hole was in the neck and the ball found lodged in the muscular tissues of the heart. This ball passed through the lungs first and then into the heart.

THE CAUSE OF THE TRAGEDY.

The present tragedy is the sequel of the murder of Nutt's father, Capt. A. C. Nutt, of Uniontown, Pa., by Dukes on the 24th of December. Capt Nutt was the state cashier, and Dukes was a prominent lawyer of Uniontown and a member of the state legislature. The circumstances of the killing were given in a dispatch printed in the papers the next morning, as follows: "The morning he came into town somewhat early for Sunday, and called upon his nephew, Clark Breckenridge, cashier of the People's bank, of Fayette county. In company with a young relative named Craft they proceeded to Mr. Breckenridge's bank. Capt. Nutt had requested young Craft to wait for him at the hotel, as he desired to have some private conversation with his nephew, and Mr. Craft withdrew. Shortly afterward the captain, accompanied by Breckenridge, crossed the street from the bank to a hotel called the Jennings house. They asked for Mr. Dukes' room, and were shown up, one taking one stairway and one the other. Mr. Dukes had informed his landlady this morning at breakfast that he wished his room placed in order while he was at breakfast, showing that the case was a premeditated one. At the doorway of Dukes' room the two visitors paused, and the captain entered alone and closed the door. Hearing some sound behind him, he turned and found the two gentlemen struggling. He threw himself between them, and succeeded in separating them. One of the men brought James J. Weather, non-in-law of the landlady, to the room. Upon his arrival he turned his back to Mr. Dukes. Breckenridge was holding the captain at this moment, so Weather testified at the inquest. Dukes raised his weapon, a 32-caliber Smith & Wesson revolver and fired at Nutt. The ball entered the left eye and pierced the brain. He fell into the arms of his nephew. Consciousness must have ceased instantly, although he continued to breathe for a few minutes after he was shot. He held a cane in his hand, and a Colt's 32-caliber revolver was found on his person, although he did not have it out of his pocket.

Dukes was tried at Uniontown on March 12 and acquitted on the 14th. On the trial it was shown that the father had been impelled to seek him out by a number of letters which Dukes had written him, in which he confessed the seduction of Nutt's daughter and gave what purported to be a circumstantial account of the manner in which she had made advances to him. He justified his acceptance of them as a matter of course, and he told of many years' married life and of his adventures with various other women, and suggested that the young woman might be spared exposure if the father would aid her in destroying the growing evidence of a guilt something of which may be imputed to the girlhood of youth and more to the twice, calculating scandalism of a man whose father was the leading lawyer of the town. The father was not ready to resign his seat in the legislature, and a warning from the citizens convinced him that it would be well to leave Uniontown, and he fled for a time, returning only to meet his death.

UNCERTAIN LILLIAN.

Some Facts and Surmises as to the Sudden Departure of Miss Lillian Russell to England.

CHICAGO, June 14.—The last escapade of Miss Lillian Russell, who formerly lived in this city, has created something like a sensation among her friends here. The cause of her sudden departure is not generally known, but it is surmised by those who are best posted in her affairs that she had signed two many contracts with managers in the east, and found herself in a bad box. Mr. C. F. Leonard, her father, who is a respectable business man in this city, said yesterday that he expected to receive a letter from her shortly explaining all she had been misguiding into signing too many agreements. The last he heard from her was about a week ago, when she was about to commence a ten weeks' engagement June 18. She had undoubtedly found that she could not sing for any one of these managers without bringing down upon herself legal proceedings from several other managers.

Another relative of Miss Russell's said that she had been harassed by her mother in New York, who had advised her wrongly to accepting engagements with managers regardless of contracts, and had turned the girl's head with visions of wealth. Miss Russell's mother is of a decidedly ultra turn of mind, and has, no doubt, ideas of the great professional success of her daughter in Europe. Miss Russell has been so harassed by her mother that she has said she was nearly driven crazy by her importunities to do this, that and the other. Her debut upon Tony Pastor's stage was made through the importunities of her mother, who used to go there every night and sit in a box. This model mother seemed to think that the admiration of the jeunesse dorée was a desirable thing, and Lillian at last broke the engagement and fled to Chicago.

John Bright's Advice to Americans.

BIRMINGHAM, June 14.—The Right Hon. John Bright delivered an address at Bingley hall before an audience of over 20,000 persons. More than one hundred and fifty addresses of congratulation from various liberal associations were presented to him, and great enthusiasm prevailed. Mr. Bright reviewed the events of the last fifty years, and laid stress upon the enormous advantages conferred upon the country by the repeal of the corn laws. Referring to America, Mr. Bright said, "Permit me to address a word to the artistic classes of the United States. I am no enemy of the United States. I fought her battles in this country. [Cheers.] I sympathize with her as much now as then; almost as much as if born on her soil. I believe the question in the United States between the protective and simply a revenue tariff is nearing its solution. The opinion is growing that irrevocable, economic facts are offering themselves for the consideration of statesmen and every intelligent man in the great republic. An extraordinary condition of things exists there. No country of any age ever experienced or dreamed of an actual surplus of revenue of $20,000,000. This fact is fatal to the high protection party. The government does not well know what to do with it." After an eloquent allusion to the war which abolished slavery, Bright said: "I believe that the next election for president will be fought on the free trade lines. The great people of United States will declare it to be the inalienable right of every American citizen to spend his money in the world's cheapest markets."

A Remarkable Case of France.

PARIS, June 14.—The case of Miss Anna C. Chalmers, who has been lying in what is supposed to be a trance for the past eleven days, is exciting considerable interest in the borough of Wilmersdorf, a few miles from this city. The young lady is about 22 years of age, is quite pretty, and is a member of a highly respected family. Up to Sunday afternoon, June 3, she was in apparently excellent health and spirits. She suddenly complained of dizziness, and went to her room, where she dropped into a swoon. From that day to this she has not spoken or taken any nourishment. All efforts to revive her have been in vain. An electric battery was applied without any success. She lies perfectly still, and is apparently unconscious of everything about her. During the eleven days of her strange affliction she has considerably fallen away in flesh. Her pulse is very weak, and occasionally the extraneous are cold.

Mahone's Satisfaction.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 14.—Gen. Mahone, who is here, expresses entire satisfaction with the result of the county elections in Virginia, and speaks with much enthusiasm as to the progress which Virginia has made under Readjuster rule. He says that the Readjusters have doubled the number of school-houses and lengthened the term of the school sessions, and there are no more school children now receiving education in the public schools as under the Bourbon rule. They have increased and improved the accommodations for the insane and otherwise helpless; they have reduced the taxes, put the finances of the state in order, and the treasury now has money in hand to pay all the just and lawful obligations of the state.

LYNCH ON TOP.

Meeting of the Mississippi Republican State Committee. Chalmers Sat Upon.

JACKSON, Miss., June 14.—The Republican state executive committee met. Many leading Republicans in the state were in deliberation with them. Congressman Lynch, chairman, said he had no war to make upon any one who had determined to do whatever he could to prevent Democratic ascendancy in the state government. There are men prominent in the politics of the state whom he could not make to gratify their own selfish ambition. Republicans should maintain their party organization in every county, but it does not necessarily follow that they should make straight party nominations for local offices. He was satisfied that local alliances and fusions were the better and wiser course for the Republicans to pursue. The Republicans of each county, through the party organization, should fuse on terms which in their judgment were conducive to the best interests of the party. The Republicans should encourage the independent movement every way except to affiliate with it. The Independent party should be composed of men heretofore acting with the Democrats. He deprecated and denounced fusion or alliances based upon race distinctions. Fusions should be made between parties and not between races or individuals.

The meeting, under complete control of Lynch, agreed on a resolution to keep up the party organization, and to co-operate with all the elements in the counties opposed to Bourbonism. A resolution endorsing Chalmers was introduced and referred to a committee, who refused to report it. They reported a substitute, endorsing the president and his liberal policy in Virginia and other southern states, and a system of internal improvements. Chalmers was in the city while the sub-committee on resolutions, with Lynch at their head had retired. Invitations were extended to a large number, including Chalmers and H. C. Carter, to speak. All but Chalmers being present declined. Before the committee appointed to wait upon Chalmers returned the sub-committee on resolutions reported, and the executive committee adjourned sine die. Chalmers arrived after adjournment. A motion was made for Lynch to resume the chair and introduce Chalmers, which Lynch refused to do, saying that the committee had adjourned. "Any one can introduce him, and let him address the citizens of Jackson," said Lynch.

SIXTEEN TIMES TOO MUCH.

A Daughter of Ex-Senator Thurman Takes Sixteen Drops of Medicine Instead of One, and Narrowly Escapes Death.

JAMAICA, L. I., June 14.—The wife of ex-Gov. R. C. McCormick, of Arizona, and daughter of ex-Senator Thurman, of Ohio, narrowly escaped death from an overdose of a potent medicine on Saturday night at her home in Jamaica, L. I. She was suffering from a nervous complaint to which she has been subject for a long time, and as the remedy which the family physician, Dr. C. H. Barker, prescribed failed to afford relief she sent to George L. Peck's pharmacy, in the village, for a bottle of bromidia, a potent remedy prepared in St. Louis. Her father sometimes used the medicine for the complaint.

Mrs. McCormick, a reporter was informed, took sixteen doses of the concoction privately in her room when she should have taken but one. She was made insensible by the drug, and was discovered in her chamber soon afterward in an almost dying condition. Death would surely have been the result, it is said, had her condition not been discovered when it was.

Dr. Barker was summoned, and antidotes were administered. She recovered, but is still weak. Her family were unable to say how she came to take so great a dose. Dr. Barker refused to give any information about the case.
